US PRE-MARKET BRIEFING - TUESDAY, JUNE 9, 2026

SECTION 1: EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

Wall Street heads into Tuesday with a schizophrenic risk picture. The S&P 500 staged a violent rebound from last week's $1T wipeout -- but this rally sits on a knife edge. US-Iran war entered its 102nd day with fresh strikes on Gulf bases, while important macro day of the year: May CPI drops at 8:30 AM ET. Consensus is up the June Fed cut narrative (currently 36% priced). On top of that, the on chip-stock euphoria while ignoring the fact that oil at $95+, sticky inconsistent with the rate-cut narrative. Watch for volume and conviction --

SECTION 3: KEY THEMES

1. CHIP STOCK REBOUND: THE $1T BOUNCE

The semiconductor sector roared back Monday after a brutal $1 trillion selloff. Google will use its chipmaking services, while Micron (MU) jumped +10.30% and told investors they should be "very happy" -- but the bounce is happening yields climbing. The snapback is technically-driven short-covering, not new mistake a dead-cat bounce for a trend reversal.

2. US-IRAN WAR: THE STRAIT OF HORMUZ FACTOR

The war entered Day 102. Iran launched missiles at US bases in Kuwait and Hormuz. Trump says both sides are "looking to agree an immediate truce" but ~20% of global oil and LNG flows -- remains effectively disrupted. The IEA 14+ million bpd. WTI hit $95.47 intraday Monday before settling at $91.27. billion. This is the single biggest tail risk to the global economy, and the

3. MAY CPI: TODAY'S MAIN EVENT

May CPI drops at 8:30 AM ET today. Consensus: 2.4% YoY headline, 2.5% core. determines whether the Fed can cut at the June 17 FOMC. Right now, CME the base case is hold at 3.50-3.75%. But the market is forward-looking: if rally. If it prints hot (2.6%+), the cut narrative collapses, yields spike, oil at $95 feeds directly into headline inflation. The market is set up for

4. TREASURY YIELDS: THE INVERSION THAT WASN'T

The 10Y yield at 4.556% and the 30Y at 5.03% reflect a market that has the front end is anchored by the Fed's current 3.50-3.75% target range. The The 10Y-2Y spread has normalized (positive), but the absolute level of long-end yields is a headwind for equity valuations. At 7,428, the S&P 500's the thinnest equity risk premium in years and leaves no margin for error.

5. GOLD: THE SILENT WARNING

Gold at $4,365/oz is down from its January all-time high of $5,608 but still despite a strong dollar (DXY ~100) and rising real yields tells you something: profit-taking, not a loss of conviction. Central bank buying (especially from support. If CPI prints hot, gold could rally back toward $4,500 as an geopolitical premium and could drop to $4,100-4,200.

6. ECB: THE OTHER CENTRAL BANK

The European Central Bank is expected to raise its deposit rate by 25bps to The ECB is fighting its own inflation battle, and the rate divergence between ~1.1550 reflects relative euro strength. If the ECB hikes and the Fed holds US equities but negative for US bond holders.

7. SPACE IPO AND APPLE WWDC: DISTRACTION OR CATALYST?

SpaceX's IPO is reportedly "well oversubscribed" with orders closing out of secondary markets. Meanwhile, Apple (AAPL) kicks off WWDC today with closed +2.01% Monday in anticipation. If Apple delivers a credible AI disappoints, the "Magnificent 7" trade gets another leg of underperformance.

SECTION 5: THE HARD TRUTH -- DAMODARAN LENS

Let me be blunt about what the market is getting wrong.

You are pricing a soft landing that hasn't happened yet. The S&P 500 at a market that has been trained by 15 years of Fed put to buy every dip.

Here is what you are ignoring:

1. Oil at $95 is inflationary. Period. You cannot have crude at $95/bbl and expect core goods disinflation to continue. The CPI energy component nowhere near the Fed's 2% target. The market is celebrating a number that
2. The Iran war is not priced. WTI at $95 implies a significant risk premium, but the S&P 500 is near ATHs. These two things cannot coexist you are looking at $110-120 oil, which means recession. The market is simultaneously denies. You are betting on hope, not fundamentals.
3. The equity risk premium is broken. At 7,428, the S&P 500 earnings yield is ~5.4%. The 10Y Treasury yields 4.56%. That's an equity risk premium of compensated almost nothing for taking equity risk. This is the definition
